IMPLICATIONS OF FAITH IN THE DEITY OF CHRIST

How anyone approaches a study of the life and teachings of Christ is fundamentally influenced by his faith or lack of faith in the Bible teaching that Jesus is the Christ, that He is Deity, that He in His stay upon earth in the flesh was "God with us" -- Immanuel. Much of the "study and research" presented in the media today approaches the subject from the perspective of unbelief, thus from the assumption that Jesus was merely a man subject to all of the limitations of human knowledge and understanding. Thus the "scholars" reason that Jesus must have experienced the work of building houses in order to teach as He did the lesson of building one's house upon the rock (Matt. 7:24-26). They also reason that Jesus must have experienced toil of farming in order to have such understanding of the laborers' toil in the heat of the day (Matt. 20:1-16).

If we, through the evidence God has supplied, are fully persuaded that Jesus is the Christ and that He is all that He claimed to be and all that the Scriptures declare Him to be, then our faith in His identity as Immanuel (Matt. 1:23) resolves doubts and questions raised by unbelief. It is no wonder that the teachers of the Law were astonished at Jesus' understanding and answers when He was twelve years old (Lk. 2:46,47). True faith in the Deity of Christ explains Jesus' capability at that age and His ability to put to silence even learned men (Matt. 22:33-46). He who had the fullness of the Spirit of God was thus filled with the excellence of knowledge that appertains to God alone. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world to Himself..." (2 Cor. 5:19). "For in Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. 2:9).

As Deity, Jesus Christ is eternal. He was with God in the beginning and was God (Jno. 1:1). He is Creator as God is (Gen. 1:1; Jno. 1:1-4; Heb. 1:1-12). All of His declarations are true and accurate. The history He cited as He taught is true without question, because He spoke from knowledge and not from human faith. This history includes the beginning, creation, marriage, the flood of Noah's day, Jonah's account of the great fish, Sodom and Gomorrah, and other places and events that unbelievers have questioned because of their unbelief. Jesus' use of Scriptures was always correct, and His interpretations were always true and exact. He is our perfect pattern for proper handling of the Word of God.

Both the Old Testament and the New Testament give us the evidence to assure us that Jesus is the Christ, that He is Deity, that He came to redeem lost mankind, and that He will judge us all at last. When we accept that evidence and believe in Him with all of our hearts, we should accept all of the necessary implications that our faith entails. After all, those who believe in Him will not be put to shame (1 Pet. 2:6). Scoffers may ridicule, and the effete elite may arrogantly demean us, but our faith is grounded and sure. Its truth is as firm as the Rock of Ages, for He is our Source. Let us embrace the faith and hold fast, for we are partakers of Christ if we hold our confidence steadfast to the end (Heb. 3:14).
